

NER

NEITHER. pronoun. Not either; nor one nor other.

He neither loves,
Nor either cares for him. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleo.
Which of them shall I take?
Both, one, or neither? neither can be enjoy'd
If both remain alive. Shakespeare's K. Lear.
Suffice it that he's dead; all wrongs die with him:
Thus I absolve myself, and excuse him,
Who sav'd my life and honour, but praise neither. Dryd.
Experience makes us sensible of both, though our narrow understandings can comprehend neither. Locke.
They lived with the friendship and equality of brethren, neither lord, neither slave to his brother; but independent of each other. Locke.

NEOPHYTE. n. f. [neophyte, Fr. ne and φύω.] One regenerate, a convert.

NEOTERIC. adj. [neotericus, Latin.] Modern; novel; late.

NEP. n. f. [nepe, Latin.] An herb.

NEPENTHE. n. f. [ne and πενθε.] A drug that drives away all pains.

There where no passion, pride, or shame transport,
Lull'd with the sweet nepe of a court;
There where no fathers, brothers, friends disgrace,
Once break their rest nor stir them from their place. Pope.

NEPHEW. n. f. [nepos, Latin; neveu, French.]

1. The son of a brother or sister.

Immortal offspring of my brother Jove;
My brightest nephew and whom best I love. Dryden.
I ask, whether in the inheriting of this paternal power, the grandson by a daughter, hath a right before a nephew by a brother? Locke.

2. The grandson. Out of use.

With what intent they were first published, those words of the nephew of Jesus do plainly enough signify, after that my grand-father Jesus had given himself to the reading of the law and the prophets, and other books of our fathers, and had gotten therein sufficient judgment, he propos'd also to write something pertaining to learning and wisdom.

Hooker, b. v. f. 21.

Her fire at length is kind,
Prepares his empire for his daughter's ease,
And for his hatching nephews smooths the seas. Dryden.

3. Descendant, however distant. Out of use.

All the sons of these five brethren reign'd
By due success, and all their nephews late,
Even thrice eleven descents the crown retain'd. Fairy 2.

NEPHRETIC. adj. [νεφρετικός; nephretique, Fr.]

1. Belonging to the organs of urine.

2. Troubled with the stone.

The diet of nephretic persons ought to be such as is opposite to the alkaline nature of the salts in their blood.

Arbutnot on Aliments.

3. Good against the stone.

The nephretic stone is commonly of an uniform dusky green;
but some samples I have seen of it that are variegated with white, black, and sometimes yellow. Woodw. Met. Foss.

NEPOTISM. n. f. [nepotisme, French; nepos, Latin.] Fondness for nephews.

To this humour of nepotism Rome owes its present splendor; for it would have been impossible to have furnished out so many glorious palaces with such a profusion of pictures and statues, had not the riches of the people fallen into different families. Addison on Italy.

NERVE. n. f. [nervus, Latin; nerf, Fr.] The organs of sensation passing from the brain to all parts of the body.

The nerves do ordinarily accompany the arteries through all the body; they have also blood-vessels, as the other parts of the body. Wherever any nerve sends out a branch, or receives one from another, or where two nerves join together, there is generally a ganglion or plexus. Quincy.

What man dare, I dare;

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves shall never tremble. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. It is used by the poets for sinew or tendon.

Strong Tharyimed discharged a speeding blow
Full on his neck, and cut the nerves in two. Pope's Odyssey.

NERVELESS. adj. [from nerve.] Without strength.

There sunk Thalia, nerveless, faint and dead,

Had not her sister Satire held her head. Daniel, b. iv.

NERVOUS. adj. [nervus, Latin.] Well strung; strong; vigorous.

What nervous arms he boasts, how firm his tread,

His limbs how turn'd. Pope's Odyssey, b. viii.

2. Relating to the nerves; having the seat in the nerves.

3. [In medical cant.] Having weak or diseased nerves.

Poor, weak, nervous creatures. Cheney.

NERVY. adj. [from nerve.] Strong; vigorous. Not in use.

NET

Death, that dark spirit, in his net arm doth lie,
Which being advanc'd, declines, and then men die. Sh.

NESCIENCE. n. f. [from nescire, Latin.] Ignorance; the state of not knowing.

Many of the most accomplished wits of all ages, have resolved their knowledge into Socrates his sum total, and after all their pains in quest of science, have sat down in a profound nescience. Glavin. Scet. c. ii.

NESS. adj. [nepe, Saxon.] Soft; tender; easily hurt. Shin.

1. A termination added to an adjective to change it into a substantive, denoting state or quality; as, poisonous, poisonousness; turbid, turbidness; lewd, lewdness; from type, Saxon.

2. The termination of many names of places where there is a headland or promontory; from nepe, Saxon; a nose of land, or headland; as INVERNESS.

NEST. n. f. [nepe, Saxon.]

1. The bed formed by the bird for incubation and feeding her young.

If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way, thou shalt not take the dam with the young. Deut. xxii. 6.

2. Any place where animals are produced.

Redi found that all kinds of putrefaction did only afford a nest and aliment for the eggs and young of those insects he admitted. Bentley.

3. An abode; place of residence; a receptacle. Generally in a bad sense; as, a nest of rogues and thieves.

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep. Shalef.

4. A warm close habitation, generally in contempt.

Some of our ministers having livings offered unto them, will neither, for zeal of religion, nor winning souls to God, be drawn forth from their warm nests. Spenser.

5. Boxes or drawers; little pockets or conveniences.

To NEST. v. n. [from nepe.] To build nests.

The cedar stretched his branches as far as the mountains of the moon, and the king of birds *nest*ed within his leaves. Houel's Veal Forst.

NESTEGG. n. f. [nepe and egg.] An egg left in the nest to keep the hen from forsaking it.

Books and money laid for shew,

Like nepeggs, to make clients lay. Hudibras.

To NESTLE. v. n. [from nepe.] To settle; to harbour; to lie close and snug, as a bird in her nest.

Their purpose was, to fortify in some strong place of the wild country, and there nestle till greater succours came.

Bacon's War with Spain.

A cock got into a stable was nestling in the straw among the horfes. L'Estrange.

The king's sifter wents commonly by the water-side, and nestle in hollow banks. L'Estrange.

Flutt'ring there they nestle near the throne,
And lodge in habitations not their own. Dryden.

The floor is strowed with several plants, amongst which the snails nestle all the winter. Addison on Italy.

Mark where the fly directors creep;
Nor to the throne approach too nigh;

The monsters nestle in the deep. Swift's Misc.

To seize you in your passing by.

To NESTLE. v. a.

1. To house, as in a nest.

That labour'd yet to nestle thee,
Thou think'st by hovering here to get a part,
In a forbidden or forbidding tree. Dante.

Cupid found a downy bed,
And nestle'd in his little head. Prior.

2. To cherish, as a bird her young.

This Ithacus, so highly is endear'd
To this Minerva; that her hand is ever in his deeds:
She, like his mother, nestles him. Chapman's Iliad.

NESTLING. n. f. [from nepe.] A bird just taken out of the nest.

NER. n. f. [nati, Gothick; net, Saxon.] A texture woven with large interstices or meshes, used commonly as a snare for animals.

Poor bird! should'st never fear the net, nor lime,
The pitfall nor the gin. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

He made nets of chequer-work for the chapters, upon the top of the pillars. 1 King vii. 17.

Impatience intangles us like the fluttering of a bird in a net, but cannot at all ease our trouble. Taylor's Holy Living.

The vegetative tribes,

Wrapt in a filmy net, and clad with leaves. Thomson.

NETHER. adj. [Gothick; Saxon; netter, Dutch.] It has the form of a comparative, but is never used in expressed, but only in implied comparison; for we see the netter part, but never say this part is netter than that, nor is any positive use, though it seems complicit in the word beneath. Netter is not now much in use.

1. Lower; not upper. No

NEV

No man shall take the net or the upper millstone to pledge; for he taketh a man's life to pledge. Deut. xxiv. 6.

In his picture are two principal errors, the one in the complexion and hair, the other in the mouth, which commonly they draw with a full and net great lip. Peacocks.

This odious offspring,

Thine own begotten, breaking violent way
Tore through my entrails; that with fear and pain
Distorted, all my net shape thus grew Transform'd. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.

The upper part thereof was whey, Hudibras, p. i.

A beauteous maid above, but magic arts,
With barking dogs deform'd her net parts. Recommon.

As if great Atlas from his height
Shou'd sink beneath his heavily weight,
And with a mighty flaw, the flaming wall Shou'd gape immense, and rushing down o'erwhelm this net ball. Dryden.

Two poles turn round the globe;

The first sublime in heaven, the last is whirl'd
Below the regions of the net world. Dryden.

2. Being in a lower place.

This shews you are above,
You justices, that these our net crimes,
So speedily can venge. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Numbetles were those bad angels, seen Hovering on wing under the cope of hell,
Twixt upper, net, and surrounding fires. Milton.

3. Infernal; belonging to the regions below.

No less desire

To found this net empire, which might rise,
In emulation, opposite to heav'n. Milton's Par. Lost.

The gods with hate beheld the net sky,
The ghosts repine. Dryden's Æn.

NE'THERMOST. n. f. [net, Saxon.] Lowest.

Great is thy mercy toward me, and thou hast delivered my soul from the *net*est hell. Psalms lxxxvi. 13.

Undaunted to meet there whatever pow'rs
Or spirits of the *net*est abyss

Might in that noise reside. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.

All that can be said of a liar lodged in the very *net*est hell, is this, that if the vengeance of God could prepare any place worse than hell for sinners, hell itself would be too good for him.

Heraclitus tells us, that the eclipse of the sun was after the manner of a boat, when the concave, as to our sight, appears uppermost, and the convex *net*est. Keilaga. Bur.

NE'TTING. n. f. A reticulated piece of work.

NE'TTLE. n. f. [netel, Saxon.] A stinging herb well known.

It hath an apetalous flower, consisting of many stamina included in an empalement; but these are barren; for the embryos are produced either on different plants, or on different parts of the same plant, without any visible flower, which becomes a bivalve seed-vessel, sometimes gathered into round heads, and at other times small and hairy, including several seeds. Miller.

The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholom berries thrive and ripen best, Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality. Shakef. Hen. V.

Some so like to thorns and nettles live,
That none for them can, when they perish, grieve. Waller.

To NETTLE. v. a. [from the noun.] To sting; to irritate; to provoke.

The princes were so nettled at the scandal of this affront, that every man took it to himself. L'Estrange.

Although at every part of the Apostles discourse some of them might be uneasy and nettled, yet a moderate silence and attention was still observed. Bentley.

NE'TWORK. n. f. [net and work.] Any thing reticulated or decorated, at equal distances, with interstices between the interstices.

Nor any skill'd in workmanship emboss'd;
Nor any skill'd in loops of fing'ring fine;
Might in their diverse cunning ever dare,
With this so curious *net*work to compare. Spenser.

A large cavity in the fuciput was filled with ribbons, lace, and embroidery, wrought together in a curious piece of network. Addison's Spectator.

NEVER. adv. [ne ever, Saxon; ne appe, not ever.]

1. At no time.

2. It is used in a form of speech handed down by the best writers, but lately accused, I think, with justice, of sole-cism; as, he is mistaken though never so wise. It is now maintained, that propriety requires it to be expressed thus, he is mistaken though ever so wise; that is, he is mistaken how wise soever he be. The common mode can only be defended by supplying a very harsh and unprecedented ellipsis; he is mistaken though so wise, as never was any: such however is the common use of the word among the best authors.

By its own force destroy'd, fruition ceas'd,
And always weary'd, I was never pleas'd. Prior.

NEU

Never any thing was so unbred as that odious man.

Congreve's Way of the World.

Be it never so true, which we teach the world to believe, yet if once their affections begin to be alienated, a small thing persuadeth them to change their opinions. Hooker.

Ask me never so much dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say. Gen. xxiv. 12.

In a living creature, though never so great, the sense and affects of any one part of the body, instantly make a transfusion throughout the whole body. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

They destroyed all, were it never so pleasant, within a mile of the town. Krause's Hist. of the Turks.

He that shuts his eyes against a small light, would not be brought to see that which he had no mind to see, let it be placed in never so clear a light, and never so near him.

Atterbury's Sermons.

That prince whom you espouse, although never so vigorously, is the principal in war, you but a second. Swift.

3. In no degree.

Whosoever has a faithful friend to guide him, may carry his eyes in another man's head, and yet see never the worse.

South's Sermons.

4. It seems in some phrases to have the sense of an adjective.

Not any.

He answered him to never a word, inasmuch that the governour marvelled. Matt. xxvii. 14.

5. It is much used in composition; as, never-ending, having no end; of which some examples are subjoined.

Nature affreth us by never-failing experience, and reason by infallible demonstration, that our times upon the earth have neither certainty nor durability. Raleigh.

Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never fear,

I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude. Milton.

Your never-failing sword made war to cease,

And now you heal us with the acts of peace. Waller.

So corn in fields, and in the garden flow'rs,
Revive and raise themselves with mod'rate show'rs;

But over-charge'd with never-ceasing rain,
Become too moist. Waller.

Our heroes of the former days,
Deserv'd and gain'd their never-fading bays: Recommon.

Not Thracian Orpheus should transcribe my lays,
Nor Linus crown'd with never-fading bays. Dryden.

Leucippus, with his never-erring dart. Dryd. Ovid.

Farewel, ye never-opening gates.

He to quench his drought to much inclin'd,
May flow'ry fields and nitrous pastures find;
Meet stores of cold to greedily pursu'd,
And be refresh'd with never-waiting food. Blackmore.

Norton hung down his never-blushing head,
And all was hush'd, as folly's self lay dead. Pope's Dunci.

What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
Is pride, the never-failing vice of fools. Pope.

Thy busy never-meaning face,

Thy scrow'd up front, thy state grimace. Swift.

NE'VERTHESS. adv. [from ne and the.] Notwithstanding that.

They plead that even such ceremonies of the church of Rome as contain in them nothing which is not of itself agreeable to the word of God, ought nevertheless to be abolished. Hooker, b. iv.

Many of our men were gone to land, and our ships ready to depart; nevertheless the admiral, with such ships only as could suddenly be put in readiness, made forth towards them. Bacon.

Creation must needs infer providence; and God's making the world, irrefragably proves that he governs it too; or that a being of a dependent nature remains nevertheless independent upon him in that respect. South's Sermons.

NEUROLOGY. n. f. [νεῦρον and λόγος.] A description of the nerves.

NEUROTONY. n. f. [νεῦρον and τόνος.] The anatomy of the nerves.

NEUTER. adj. [neuter, Latin; neutre, Fr.]

1. Indifferent; not engaged on either side.

The general division of the British nation is into whigs and Tories; there being very few, if any, who stand neuter in the dispute, without ranging themselves under one of these denominations. Addison's Freeholder, N. 54.

2. [In grammar.] A noun that implies no sex.

The adjectives are neuter, and animal must be understood to make it grammar. Dryden.

A verb neuter is that which signifies neither action nor passion, but some state or condition of being; as, sedes, I sit. Clarke's Latin Grammar.

NEUTER. n. f. One indifferent and unengaged.

The learned heathens may be
